Established in 1936, the Syracuse Peace Council is the oldest local, autonomous peace and justice organization in the United States. The Peace Council organizes primarily in the Central New York community but also works closely with student activists and university faculty in the region.

SPEAKERS

As a community activist organization the Peace Council's focus is on what citizens are doing and can do to create a more just and peaceful community, nation and world. Although we have a small paid staff, we have many volunteers and are connected to a wide-range of people with expertise on peace and social justice issues.

Below are some possible topics for presentations, but don't hesitate to ask for something else.

- ◆ Iraq: Behind the Hype and Misinformation
- ◆ Is it really a "War on Terrorism"? What are some Alternatives?
- ◆ Building a US foreign policy based on Cooperation, not Domination
- ◆ The Israeli-Palestinian Conflict
- ◆ The School of the Americas and the "War on Terrorism"
- ◆ Colombia: The Hidden War
- ◆ Globalization and War: Making the Connections
- ◆ Promoting Global Justice/Resisting Corporate Globalization
- ◆ Connections between War and Violence in our Communities
- ◆ Nonviolent Action—Current and Past Practice
- ◆ Supporting Native American Land Claims in Central New York

WORKSHOPS

The Syracuse Peace Council's staff and volunteers have many decades of experience in working for social change, including several people with extensive training experience.

Below are several possible themes for workshops, although the list is far from exhaustive.

- ◆ Preparing for Nonviolent Action
- ◆ Mainstream Media Work for Activists
- ◆ Planning and Facilitating Effective Meetings
- ◆ Organizing a Campus Peace and Justice Organization

FEES

An honorarium and transportation costs are required. Fees are negotiable, but are very important to supplement other sources of income. Please try to be as generous as possible with honoraria.
